CONSTRUCTION FOCUS

- MICC versus Army Corp of Engineers
 - SRM versus MILCON
- Examples of MICC Construction Contracts:
 - HVAC, Demolition, Water Main, etc.

Mission and Installation Contracting Command

There are multiple ways to complete Construction Requirements.

Sealed Bidding (FAR Part 14)

- This is used for VERY WELL defined requirements.
- SOW and drawings must be complete.
- NO design is completed by the contractor (KTR). “Red lined” drawings are ok after project is completed if required by the SOW.

MAID/IQ(Multiple Award Indefinite Delivery/Indefinite Quantity) (10 U.S.C. 2305a & 41 U.S.C. 253m)

- Great to use on projects that are not fully designed.
- Projects are designed and constructed to lowest priced proposal supplied by the MAID/IQ holders.

Mission and Installation Contracting Command

IDIQ -Indefinite Delivery, Indefinite Quantity (FAR Part 16.5)

- For re-occurring work such as asphalt, roofing, HVAC, Flooring, Concrete/Gravel.
- Have awarded contract to one KTR to cut task orders off bid schedule.
- Fast turn around for award.
- Limits the Government's obligation to a minimum guarantee.
- KTR only has to bond the individual task orders.

Requirements Contracts (FAR 16.503)

- Similar to IDIQ contracts. Main difference is the Government is required to use this award for the re-occurring work.
- No minimum guarantee.
- KTR has to bond the entire year.

Mission and Installation Contracting Command

Job Order Contract- (JOC)

- Job order contracting uses an IDIQ type of contract to reduce the total lead time for accomplishing sustainment, restoration, and modernization (SRM) projects.
- Pre-priced units of work are used to streamline the contracting process within the overall framework of a fixed-price construction contract.
- Uses a Unit Price Book (UPB), such as RS Means to price work to be completed for each task order.

Architect-Engineer Services – A&E (FAR 36.6)

- Used for design of a project that can not be designed by the Government.

Other types of contracts used in Construction:

- Two step sealed bidding, two step design/build.
- Both of these can be used, but are very time consuming and should only be used when necessary.
